"A certain and uniform system of law for a country so large in area and so divided as to government can be attained only through making plain by visible expression with the greatest stallands certainty simplicity, completeness and order the great greatest stallands certainty simplicity, completeness and order the great greatest stallands certainty simplicity, completeness and order the great greatest appear to five which has been developed, but which has been developed, but which has been indequently expressed in this country. The report says.

The possibility for improvement of our law cannot be overestimated, continues the report. The causes for the confusion and uncertainty of the law and the responsibility for them are matters which are relevant to the means which may be taken to improve the law.

"Of these causes it may be remarked that in a complex and progressive system of law, there is a matural tendency (in the absence of counter influences) to confusion and uncertainty and, in a country composed of so many states with a large number of independent courts and with ne-court of ultimate decision as to a large part of the subjects of illigation this tendency in increased.

The long period between the election of the president of the United States and his inauguration is "a serious evil fraught with much danger," according to the report of the appeals committee on the change in date of the presidential inauguration.

The report recommends that the port of the schedules and the theory of the schedules of the presidential inauguration.
